Citizenship In An Interrelated World

A TRANSPERSONAL APPROACH

Tuesday 17 to Friday 20 August 2004

Regents College, Regents Park, London NW1

The Conference is for all those in Europe and elsewhere who are interested in the relation between the inner aspects of their lives and the outward living of them. It is not a conference at which you will sit at the feet of great people and hear their views. It is rather a time for personal reflection on the contribution we can make in our own special ways to the complexity of the fast changing global, regional and local societies in which we find ourselves members.

It will be a celebration of transpersonal psychology in the wider world and will appeal to all those looking to refresh themselves in the company of like-minded people from many different cultures, backgrounds and disciplines.

An outline programme of 12 lectures and 40-80 different workshops is being developed. The First Ian Gordon-Brown Commemorative Lecture will form part of the Proceedings. Each day will have themes that consider transpersonal aspects of society – health, environment, education, citizenship, the faith traditions, management, spiritual emergency, research and training.

If you are interested in attending the London Conference from 17-20 August 2004 and would like to receive details as they become available please email your name, organisation, address, daytime phone and email to karihall@alumedia.com
